

In year 6 at the moment we are learning to participate in a panel discussion where we analyse and evaluate the style of Elizabeth Honey – an author of children’s novels. We read two novels – 45 + 47 Stella Street and Don’t Pat The Wombat. Next, we analysed her approaches in both books and decided which one she was more effective in thinking about her language, visual and text features. Both books were pretty funny but most of us think that 45 + 47 Stella Street’s language was hilarious. Now we are presenting our findings to a panel that will challenge and question our opinions. We are a bit nervous about the presentations but we have worked hard to put together some detailed speeches.
